

Updated Statistics, page 224

Updated in 2017

Refugees are generally accepted on an individual (or family) basis, although large numbers from one area may be accepted in the event of a crisis. For example, in a 14-month basis, starting near the end of 2015, Canada accepted more than 40,000 refugees from a civil war in Syria.